Here was proof again, like lithography, the steam engine, the railroad, of an age of "progress," of enlightened reason prevailing over dark superstition, and science over magic. Jen added it Jan 03, Willis in the Corsair April 13, the first published news of photography in the American press.

Gregory rated it it was ok Nov 19, Return to Book Page. Seizing the Englishman's remark that the invention would abridge "the labor of the artist in copying natural objects," and that "by means of this contrivance, it is not the artist who makes the picture, but the picture which makes itself," Willis calls up a scene of panic among displaced craftsmen:
