It is truly marvelous how, in his magical manipulation, the loop of the hempen line widens and contracts at his will, soars in a great floating ring high overhead, glides serpent-like near the ground, rises and falls about him, and finally, darting away, loops itself unerringly upon the passing man or beast at whom it may be directed. The air pulsates with the vigorous life and movement of the savages and their horses, a vibrant impulse that stirs the consciousness more than the senses. Detailed text and colorful pictures describe different kinds of weather.
