We know of five, of which the last three survive. However, the professions of faith of the Jansenist women allow scope for personalization In Mediaeval iconography an ape often holds a mirror in which the sinner sees himself as the simia dei. Beknowledgeable, but keep your knowledge to yourself, even in these profess However, just how much of Histoire d'une jeune fille sauvage Hecquet herself wrote is not clear and the work has sometimes been attributed to the French scientist-explorer Charles-Marie de la Condamine even though La Condamine himself publicly denied its authorship. Updated editions will replace the previous one--the old editions will be renamed. The Introitus that opens the Systema leaves no doubt:
