This means that the bibliography does not include stories about clairvoyants, seers, or prophets; books relating communications from spirits; spiritualistic speculations about the afterlife or related matters; and collections of ghost-lore. With this acknowledgement of the importance of suggestion, Bertrand anticipates the ideas of Braid about the true nature of animal magnetic phenomena. He had early proved himself to be an extremely effective magnetizer, and when Dr. Paranormal-type phenomena, such as clairvoyance and precognition, were recorded. But since there are people in Italy, at Piedmont, who are nonetheless practicing it, something needs to be written in response. An extremely rare book which contains, among other things, the original of a small treatise by Mesmer entitled: At the very beginning of the thesis Mesmer states that he is attempting to continue the work of Richard Mead – who wrote about the influence of the stars on men. Early in his treatment of Friederike Hauffe, Kerner decided to use animal magnetism. The last forty pages of the book give a concise summary of the views of the author on animal magnetism and its history since Mesmer. Among other things he was known for his opposition to all forms of quackery in medicine, having written extensively on the subject.
