Plus, we've got an uncensored version! Don Siegel was going to direct but did not like the screenplay.

Julius Caesar play Metaphors referring to animals Shakespearean phrases. He combines canine senses with sentience, human DNA and then also Dogs of War cybernetically integrated weapons systems. The way Rex, the main character, was developed over the course of the novel - slowly becoming more eloquent and slowly gaining more perspective of his role in life was really quite well done I thought.
