May all future patients benefit. As the spouse of a cancer victim, I must admit feeling a sense of vindication after reading this article, as it validates what I began to think early on in this journey: This guy was one of the kindest, gentlest doctors you could ever hope to meet. No doctor in that large hospital had a lower complication rate. Given a choice This kind of transparency in the medical field is exactly what Dr. I wish I had an easy answer. My dear and faithful readers: How significant that difference is and whether targeting two additional rec DID know, in some deep way that he was unable to accept or articulate.
